

JESSE GARBER

Jesse Garber is 23 and, until his current illness, was an active, physically healthy and happy young man. He played intercollegiate volleyball at UC Santa Cruz and, after graduating from college, he developed an interest in pursuing a career as an institutional researcher. He had planned to begin a master's degree program in Sociology at San Diego State University this coming fall with the future goal to work in the community college system.

All of this has changed for now, and today Jesse needs a liver transplant. His parents Bob and Rebecca are very grateful to the Pierce community for this blood drive and your generous gift that will not only help Jesse, but many other critically ill patients at UCLA.
