Performed along the bank of the Los Angeles River at the

Rio de Los Angeles State Park - Bowtie Parcel entrance adjacent to 2800 Casitas Ave, LA 90039

Touch the water. Come to the river this spring and let the magical waters of Los Angeles wash over you.

Under the City of Angels runs a fierce river flowing from the mountains to the ocean. But do you know it's there? Once an unpredictable and mighty stream, a bountiful life source subject to raging floods, the Los Angeles River has lived under a shroud of concrete for the past fifty years. Today, having been tamed and transformed into an industrial flood channel, the river is at the center of much debate. What happens when we change Nature? Should we free the river from her concrete corset and let Angelenos finally touch the water?

This play was created in collaboration with local river residents, engineers, biologists, environmentalists, activists, advocates and patrons who walk, fish, bike and ride horses on the river.

Community Partners include: Friends of the LA River (FoLAR), Metabolic Studio/Farmlab, South Asian Network (SAN)
