Re "West Hills council might call it quits" (Aug. 22):

You should write not only of the problems with neighborhood councils and the Department of Neighborhood Empowerment, but of the many successful councils and what they have accomplished. And how the Department of Neighborhood Empowerment helped these councils in the process of certification and successful elections.

You often mention the problems of Van Nuys. Do you know they are a certified neighborhood council with a seated board? When mentioning Northridge, did you realize how few people spoke for certification or hear community members who said they were not being represented? I suggest you send your reporters to the meetings of successful councils, and write about them and not just the few neighborhood councils with problems.
