Nelson responds

In its Oct. 8 editorial, the Daily News suggested the City Council investigate the Department of Neighborhood Empowerment to prove that it's living up to its name. My answer is a simple one: Anytime. Let's do it!

Our department is always ready to account to the public for its actions. We are constantly being scrutinized by the City Council in public meetings, and we'll attend as many meetings as we are invited to -- and we'll stay until the last question is answered.
